Bi-Monthly Bulletin
November - December, 2024

Vol. I
Issue - 19

As we approach the end of the year, we move from thankful hearts in November to joyful ones in December, carrying gratitude and hope into the new year. Despite the hectic schedule for both student-teachers and teacher-educators, the usual rush to complete courses, conduct internal and external assessment for all the session's activities and prepare for end-of-semester exams was ever-present. Yet, amidst this demanding period, there were also enjoyable and memorable moments. Our Bi-Monthly bulletin is here to share updates on these events and serve as a platform for showcasing the creative and imaginative sides of the SCTEians.

Happy reading !

The Heart of Two Worlds: Juggling Motherhood and Teaching

Balancing the roles of a teacher and a mother is a delicate dance, one that requires patience, resilience, and an endless supply of love. It is waking up before dawn to prepare lesson plans while also packing school lunches. It is standing in front of a classroom, giving your students every ounce of wisdom and encouragement, only to return home and do the same for your own children.

As a teacher, you nurture minds, helping young souls discover their potential. As a mother, you nurture hearts, guiding your little ones through the world's wonders and challenges. Both roles demand your energy, your time, and your spirit, yet they also offer immeasurable rewards, the joy of watching a student grasp a difficult concept, the warmth of your child's hug after a long day.

There are moments of exhaustion when the weight of responsibilities feels overwhelming, when grading papers at midnight collides with soothing a feverish child. But there are also moments of profound beauty when your students remind you why you love teaching, and when your child's laughter makes all the struggles worthwhile.

The secret to this balance is not perfection but acceptance. Accepting that some days, one role will demand more than the other. Accepting that it's okay to seek help. Accepting that despite the chaos, you are enough.

To every mother who teaches and every teacher who mothers your work matters. Your love shapes lives. And in the end, the legacy you leave behind is not just in lessons taught but in the hearts you've touched, both in your classroom and at home.

HYSTERICALITY

It was hush aura,
Wrapped in quite serenity,
Until the caldera gush underneath,
Sparking tremors beneath.

The hysterical being erupts-
Alas ! It is untamed,
Amid the beguiled elation,

Chaos lingers by the door,
Madness' dance bears the weight.
